Soul Mates - The Chemistry Between You Both

Above is astrological data for Person A and Person B. This report defines the interactions between the Planets in one person's birth chart and the Planets in another person's. Please note who is 'A' and who is 'B', and then check the Birth Data is correct.

The interpretations mainly focus upon sexual/romantic relationships, but friends, family and even business partnerships can also be looked at.

Key Contacts

These are usually the most powerful and dynamic points of interaction between you, but do not be put off if you find little or none, as other interactions will provide strong connections. Key Contacts can be seen as: First, Second and Third Impressions. The report proceeds with:

Major Challenges and Strengths, Minor Challenges and Minor Strengths

The Golden Rules

When viewing a relationship report, it is important to bear in mind that there will be:-

Interchangability - individuals will swap roles in relationships, due to psychological projection, gender roles, individual status and inclination, etc..

Double Whammies - when certain interactions are repeated, because that interaction goes both ways it affects the relationship very strongly.

"Birth Time Sensitive" interactions, means the interpretation will be correct only when the birth times are accurate to within fifteen minutes. Also, if a birth time is only to within several hours, then any interactions involving the Moon of that person should be regarded as possibly being unreliable.

The Chemistry Between You Both

No one interaction can make or break a relationship - In a healthy relationship, there is always a strength to deal with a stress or a strain, through time and love challenges if met, can always be overcome.

Key Contacts First Impressions

A's Saturn Conjunct B's Ascendant*

A Karmic tie Birth Time Sensitive

This key contact is very much a parent/child kind of relationship, literally or figuratively. It falls to the one person, the 'parent' to be the teacher, guide and setter of limits with regard to the other person, the 'child'. This can be experienced by the 'child' as the heavy 'father/mother' who restricts their self-expression, moulds their character and way of doing things, and suppresses their very identity. On the other hand, it could be more a case of the 'parent' showing the 'child' how to be more mature and methodical, objective and businesslike. How patient the 'parent' or teacher is and how receptive the 'child' or pupil is can therefore be the critical issue. What the 'parent' has to be careful of is to avoid projecting their own weaknesses and inadequacies on to the 'child' and becoming the above-described brow-beater, chastising themselves through their 'child'. So this interaction forces the 'parent' to be more mature, patient and responsible too, but with the difference that they are mostly having to teach it all to themselves. If the 'child' resists or rebels against the 'parent' even when they are being a just and level-headed teacher, then they can expect the 'parent' one day to leave them - temporarily or permanently - to their own devices. But the 'parent' has to learn to 'bear kindly with the fool' rather than dismiss the 'child' as being hopelessly naïve, selfish and generally brat-like. The circumstances that you both find yourselves in may well be limiting in some way. This is because it is teaching you both to ascertain what is holding you back in life, get real, and do something about it. By looking at the sign position(s) of the Saturn and the Ascendant in your respective charts, it may be seen what issues this 'parent/child' type relationship revolves around, because such will tell you what you are both supposed to be learning about. It is unlikely that either of you will get out of this 'classroom' relationship until those lessons have been learned. This could take quite some time, and for this reason, if no other, your relationship is probably a long-lasting one.

A's Pluto Conjunct B's Ascendant*

Empowerment or disempowerment Birth Time Sensitive

One of you is strongly inclined to feel under the influence of the other person, - but it can sometimes work both ways. At first, the feeling of being 'under the influence' could amount simply to being impressed. Later on however, this can come to be a feeling of empowerment or disempowerment as the person with the influence either feels disposed towards attacking or supporting the one who is under their influence. In either case, this influence is taken in quite compulsively because the 'influenced' feels very dependent upon the 'influencer' in some way. If the influencing is entirely positive, then you can either instil or confirm a sense of effectiveness and worth in each other. One individual benefits particularly from having their image bolstered or their appearance transformed in some way. The other individual, who is doing the bolstering, gets to feel more influential as a person. If, or when, the negative holds sway, then one or both of you will have to look at why your need to gain approval for yourself has degenerated to the point of receiving abuse instead - maybe in the hope of getting a few crumbs of praise. But merely to resist the 'influencer' would not turn things around. Whichever of you is needing such affirmation of their existence - and it could well be both of you - would be far better off seeking something that would do this more consciously and without an emotional agenda. Verbal affirmations (like "I am that I am" or something more personal), psychotherapy or some course of self-improvement are a few suggestions. If you are both confident enough in yourselves, none of the above should be that much of an issue, one way or the other. Instead, you could both be deeply involved together in a program of self-transformation or some other kind of psycho-spiritual project. Or you may simply enjoy a very deep emotional and physical intimacy.

A's Ascendant Conjunct B's Ascendant*

Identifying with one another Birth Time Sensitive

There is an immediate and mutual physical attraction between you, as well as strongly identifying with one another. However the quality of it and how such an attraction develops greatly depends on the Signs which you both have rising, (your Ascendants or Rising Signs) which will usually be the same. Certain Signs are destined to get on together better and longer, like Sagittarius or Taurus, whereas others can fall foul of a doubling up of inherent weakness. For example, Libra can fall in love with love only to find a mirage is all that they're left with; Gemini can amuse and interest each other but never get that involved; Cancer can cling together tightly and securely, but suffer claustrophobia later. Aries or Leo would be exciting but competitive; Virgo just right or just not quite right. Scorpio is a pairing that can definitely merge and stay that way, come hell or high water; but Capricorn would get too dull if it ever got off the ground at all. Aquarius could be a very easy, friendly pairing as long as neither wanted anything more emotionally profound. Finally, Pisces could be blissful if they managed to stay entwined long enough to find out. Furthermore, this interaction is one to get you going in the first place, but the course of your relationship will fall to the other interactions between you.

Key Contacts - Second Impressions

A's Jupiter Conjunct B's Sun*

Warmth and goodwill

You have an affinity with each other that is very healthy and honest. Not only are you mutually supportive and encouraging, but as a couple you both go out of your way to be helpful and generous towards others. Owing to this, and a generally good feel about the pair of you, you are popular. Naturally enough, this interaction favours being parents or anyone in authority, not least because there is always a benign quality about you and between you. This is one of the few interactions that is entirely positive, and it goes along way to overcoming friction and disagreement indicated elsewhere. This could be further aided, even transcended, owing to the fact that, together or individually, you might follow some definite moral code or spiritual discipline. It must be pointed out that this is not an emotional interaction - it can even be quite impersonal - and so it does not in itself indicate romance, just that good feeling. This all promises that - mentally or spiritually, materially or emotionally - to some degree you will grow, as partners or as individuals, as a result of your time together.

Key Contacts - Third Impressions

A's Saturn Conjunct B's PlutoPower: healing or destructive?*

This is essentially a businesslike contact - literally or figuratively. If other interactions comply or contribute, you can further one another, individually or together, in your careers. Usually, one of you will be the organisational side, and the other will provide the thrust and insight - but these delineations should not be taken too literally, for there should be some crossover of roles. Actually, the ability to interchange and trust, give and take power and position, is very important to your getting ahead and not running into a competition of control and manipulation. Together you can present a formidable front that would impress any group or individual. On the other hand, any power politics that go wrong will give off a decidedly nasty smell. So the good and enlightened management of your unmistakably powerful energy combination is vital. In fact, the clean and upright use of power may be the very thing you use, teach or espouse - or are having to learn through this interaction. On a more emotional level, which may or may not be that obvious with this aspect, One of you acts as a limiting and disciplining influence over any degenerate or wasteful qualities in the other, while they in turn are able to penetrate to their opposite number's secret weaknesses and show them the instability they can cause in their life structure. Again, these roles can be interchangeable. How successful you both are with such manipulation of your respective inner workings depends greatly on that trust-building and the debugging of any potentially suspicion-producing elements.

A's Uranus Conjunct B's UranusThe call of the new?*

This interaction is generational and so its significance for you as individuals depends upon what other interactions you have that dispose your relationship towards the unconventional, exciting, unpredictable, open, liberating, forward-looking, detached, alternative, etc. If this is the case, then this interaction is saying that such qualities are central to your being together. On a purely generational level, you were both born and grew up in a time that saw the same technological advances and changes in social or political values.

A's Neptune Conjunct B's NeptuneCultural compatibility*

This is a generational contact, meaning that you are more or less the same age and therefore have been subjected to similar cultural, spiritual and musical influences in your lives. Such acts as a general underlay of compatibility in these respects.

A's Pluto Conjunct B's PlutoPossible intensity*

This is a generational contact, meaning that you are more or less the same age and therefore have been subjected to similar psychological, political and global changes in your lives. If there are a number of passionate or obsessive contacts between the two of you, this would make it all the more so because your social environment would encourage same.

Major Challenges

A's Sun Challenging B's Moon*

A superior/inferior problem

This makes for a basic incompatibility. You would need to have a great deal going for your relationship in terms of external and superficial worth, or conversely, inner and spiritual worth, in order to override this one. One of you, the 'Sun' person cannot seem to appreciate where the other, 'Moon' person is coming from emotionally. Consequently, they often offend, confuse or dominate the 'Moon' person without even knowing it. The 'Moon' person's background and personal habits do not fit in with the 'Sun's' life-style. Another, and decidedly better way of overcoming, or at least diminishing, the negative effects of this interaction, is for the 'Moon' to become very aware of how and why they react to the 'Sun's' way of being. In the meantime, the 'Sun' would have to learn to observe how the 'Moon' is feeling and avoid stepping on their toes. Even so, this is not a desirable interaction, especially between parents for you can put out mixed messages and double standards to your children - unless these problems are dealt with in the manner suggested.

A's Sun Challenging B's Venus*

Disappointed love

This interaction can amount to being one of Cupid's most capricious darts. You are drawn together for relatively superficial and indulgent reasons, but at the time it will have seemed quite, even intensely, romantic. But as time goes by the differences between you make it uncomfortably clear that your values and intentions are at odds with one another. One of you seems less and less able to please the other, who then feels that that person is beneath them. It would seem that one individual's point of view is obscured by their chagrin at not having things as they like them, while the other expresses the very traits, which rub this in. Love and vanity make poor companions, with the result that there is no real understanding or sympathy between you - or at least, it is not provided by this aspect on its own. If one of you could be less egotistical and the other more sure of their worth then all would be well, but the very nature of this interaction spells out that this is probably just not the case - yet ultimately these are the respective lessons you have to learn, with or without one another.

A's Moon Challenging B's Venus*

Conflicting needs

Needs for pleasure and needs for security, and the clash between them, strongly colour this aspect of your relationship. Such motivations, valid as far as they go, do not make for a deeper bond, or most importantly, a respect and recognition for each other as individuals in your own right. At one level, and also beneath the surface, you are each in the relationship for different reasons. At a superficial level you may appear to both be getting what you want or need, but sooner or later such will not be enough - for one or both of you. Of course, other interactions may supply this, but because this one represents such a pull towards comfort and pleasure you may not even notice what else you have, or have not, got going for you - until one of you suddenly stops supplying the cushions or candy, or some crisis strikes. This means that one of you goes cold or even looks elsewhere - while the other withdraws or sulks. Another possible hitch can be your relationship being complicated by the mother or family of one or both of you, or the domestic set-up, compromising your social/love life. Behind any or all such difficulties is the fact that, in one important area at least, you are not emotionally or socially in tune. Paradoxically though, because this interaction is very 'female', it makes for a basic and instinctual empathy, whatever your sex, that can tolerate and accommodate a great deal of strife, within or outside of your relationship. This also means that you are hospitable to others. But it is this very 'accommodation' that can gloss over the gritty issues that one day will have to surface.

A's Moon Challenging B's Neptune*

Emotional compulsion

The issue here is one or both of you having personal boundaries that are defined too strongly or not strongly enough. Consequently, there are three possible scenarios. If you both have vague ideas of where you begin and end as individuals, you then accommodate each other only too well, in a rather indiscriminate fashion. This invites emotional confusion, as you tend to drag one another down to the lowest common denominator of living standard. What allows this to happen is the fact that in the first place you kind of melt into each other, fostering the illusion that you are closer than you actually are or were. In this case, one or both of you has to find the strength or help to make a stand, possibly having to be quite ruthless in the process. The second case is when one of you is quite open emotionally, and the other is relatively closed. The open one gets under the closed one's skin, in spite of themselves, forcing them to be more emotionally forthcoming. Unfortunately, this is unlikely to be done consciously, but more in the way of being victim-like and needy, compromising the other 'stronger' person in the process. But the stronger person should read this as having to be more compassionate. The third case, when both of you are quite separate as people, would mean that something occurs or will occur that forces you to be more open about your individual vulnerability. Without dealing with whatever your scenario is in the constructive ways suggested here, your relationship could go from confusion to delusion, from misconception to rank deception.

A's Ascendant Challenging B's Moon*

Habit versus manner Birth Time Sensitive

The manner of self-expression of one of you rubs up the wrong way the emotional sensibilities of the other. In return, their reaction to this invites more of same. Also, your respective habits and routines can also prove somewhat annoying to one another. This vicious circle needs to be broken by at least one of you to prevent such disharmony developing into an outright breakdown of any kind of positive interaction. In other words, self-control and some compromises are called for in both of your behaviour patterns. Failure to do this can additionally preclude doing anything together that caters to others or the public. Neither is this interaction that favourable for domestic co-existence.

A's Mercury Challenging B's Venus*

Head versus body

Here you have a work versus play, thinking versus feeling, conflict. The 'thinker' of you approaches intellectually issues that the 'feeler' regards as either 'like' or 'don't like' situations which no amount of explanation or argument is going to alter. In the face of what they see as the 'feeling' person's intransigence, the 'thinker' can even go so far as laying down what love is or isn't, what is enjoyable or immoral. The 'feeling' person can then react to this in a teasing or capricious manner that riles the 'thinker' even more. This conflict is made more acute when, of the two of you, the 'thinker' is the male and the 'feeler' the female. No amount of talk or theorising can turn the 'feeler' on or off, whereas their demand for sensation rather than reason is seen as aimless indulgence by the 'thinker'. As a challenging aspect this demands that each of you be strong enough in your own convictions of reason and taste not to react to each other. Both of you should endeavour to meet the other half way: the 'thinker' to listen and respond to the 'feeler's' emotional and body language; the 'feeler' to make some attempt to listen to the voice of reason.

A's Saturn Challenging B's Mercury*

A communication block

Often, when putting forth their thoughts or ideas, one of you, the 'student' seems to have to go through an examination under the other person. Literally or metaphorically, this is a student/teacher relationship. In an emotional relationship of any kind, this can obviously give rise to an inferior/superior set-up, with the resentments and disdain that accompany it. If however, the 'student' can appreciate that their ideas probably do need to be made more practical, or put into practice, and that the 'teacher' has a point, then this would make a potentially negative interaction quite fruitful. Additionally or alternatively, the 'student' may need to take on board the necessity of using their intellect less and their feelings more. The 'teacher', on the other hand, like any good teacher, has to find a way of saying what they have to say in a way that does not make the 'student' feel stupid or inferior. Ironically, the 'student' can see the 'teacher' as being stupid because they appear dull and slow, unimaginative and overly conservative. The 'teacher' should seriously consider (their forte, after all) whether the 'student' has a point here, because one day that 'student' might get so fed up with having their ideas squashed that they find a new teacher! If both of you can take these points on board, you can have an intellectually serious and mutual learning relationship, rather than a cold and dry one.

A's Mercury Challenging B's Neptune*

A need to re-attune

This can be a bit like trying to plug the telephone into the television. Both are wonderful transmitter/receivers, but without some radical rewiring (profound change in perception of how you view life and one another) they are not going to communicate very well with each other. The logical approach of one of you, the 'thinker', is annoyed or baffled by the more sensitive and holistic view of the other, the 'dreamer'. The 'thinker' wants to see everything and everyone as separate, categorisable, entities, whereas the 'dreamer' feels everything and everyone to be totally interconnected. What this does for your perception of one another is that the 'thinker' holds the 'dreamer' to be unrealistic and self-deluding - and therefore unreliable, possibly deceptive, even mentally unbalanced. Conversely, the 'dreamer' sees the 'thinker' as not seeing the whole picture, over-simplifying what is complex but beautiful, and generally enchained by intellectual tyranny. The 'thinker's' tunnel-vision of the 'dreamer' as a person is what can be really troublesome for the 'dreamer', because they seem to be seen only as someone who must fit, or will not fit, into the 'thinker's' linear landscape. Eventually, rather than argue the point, the 'dreamer' will, possibly unconsciously, go along with the 'thinker's' idea of them, which ironically means that the 'dreamer' becomes the very shape-shifter that the 'thinker' cannot handle. This is because the 'thinker' is putting out myriad expectations that their rational perception overlooks. But all the while, the 'thinker' thinks they're the one with a firm grip on reality. The point is that they well may be, but they will have to prove it in the face of the 'dreamer's' possibly neurotic and evasive antics. But the reality is not that either of you are right or wrong, but that the telephone and the television are vaguely similar but quite different, and very unlikely ever to make lasting or meaningful contact - unless that 'radical rewiring' is done. For the reason why you experience this interaction at all is so that you can hopefully appreciate the existence of both these modes of perception/communication, and not simply become alienated by getting stuck on the illusory fence between correct and incorrect, real and unreal. Incidentally, the crossed lines that this interaction produces can also manifest as the two of you having some kind of breakdown of communication with others, like neighbours or colleagues. Overall, and basically, this interaction causes a misconception of what one of you is to the other, and the glitches in communication that follow upon this.

A's Pluto Challenging B's Mercury*

Mental interrogation

One of you, the 'logical' person, has a perception of life that is the more practical and 'safe' in comparison to the other, 'delving', person's probing or psychological way of looking at it. In the face of the 'delver's' X-ray gaze the 'logical' one therefore finds that they have to dodge and weave and consequently appear even more superficial and 'reasonable'. On the other hand, the 'logical' one may just refuse to budge from what they see as their more sensible standpoint, branding the 'delver' as being too obsessed with always wanting to get to the very bottom of things. The 'delver's' response to this will be to use every means at their disposal to influence the 'logical' one's thinking with their propaganda of psychological or occult values. Not surprisingly, this is not an interaction to inspire trust - on the contrary, it can lead to 'paranoia' on one or both of your parts. To resolve or prevent the breakdown in communication that this can create, the 'delver' should honestly look at the possibility that the reason they want the 'logical' one to see things their way is that they are not entirely convinced of it themselves. The 'logical' one, apart from getting the 'delver' to lighten up a bit, should meet them halfway and take a deeper look at themselves and the meaning of life. Who knows, they may then be able to give the 'delver' a spot of their own mental medicine.

A's Ascendant Challenging B's Mercury*

Differing attitudes Birth Time Sensitive

There is a mildly critical atmosphere that pervades your relationship. The perception of the one of you fails to appreciate the body language of the other, and this can lead to an irritation that infects other parts of your being together. Making decisions together could also present a problem in itself. If you can see your two different attitudes as a means of hashing things out - in a good-humoured fashion - then this not-too-significant interaction will have its 'irritant' value diminished, or even converted into something useful.

A's Venus Challenging B's Venus*

A need to accommodate different values

Your tastes and values clash in some areas. This may not be too great a problem unless you let it become so. Small things like disagreeing on what to buy, what film to see, what food to eat, etc., if allowed to become a priority could undermine whatever sharing and harmony you have between you. More seriously though, an imbalance in terms of how much or what type of affection is shown could amount to a dissatisfaction that is hard to ignore. If such a thing can be regarded as not that important, then well and good. If not however, dissatisfaction could lead to separation.

A's Venus Challenging B's NeptuneHigher love or illusion of love*

It could be that one of you is in love with their idea of the other rather than the person themselves - it could also be mutual. Depending on many factors such as image-sustaining material situations and how much both of you wish to please one another by fitting their romantic ideal, this classic indication of 'love's illusions' can persist for quite some time. However, when something happens to bring you both down to earth - such as one of you being attracted to someone else, money problems, a loss, or one of you simply feeling that you are not being loved for yourself - then the real, human, fragile versions of yourselves begin to emerge. It is then when this interaction challenges you to love unconditionally and spiritually. If you rise to this, then you will have put your relationship on a higher and nobler footing altogether. Failure however, would amount to an uncomfortable and embarrassing separation, perhaps after trying to fake it for a bit longer. Be that as it may, it is also quite likely that you are involved creatively in some way - and this would greatly contribute to stabilising this interaction by giving imagination and fantasy a positive outlet.

A's Mars Challenging B's SaturnBrakes and accelerator*

The interaction that you have here is bound to give you trouble and stop you getting anywhere as a couple - unless one of you, who we'll call the 'Martian' is prepared to take stock of how they actually go (or don't go) about getting what they want as an individual, and if the other, who we'll call the 'Saturnian', is not too hard on the 'Martian' for not being as effective or mature as they deem they should be. But 'hard' is very much the keynote of this hard aspect, which means that hard feelings are bound to arise - that is unless you are both seeing the hardness as coming from some quarter external to the relationship itself. The reason behind such hardness is that the 'Saturnian' is inclined to thwart and control the 'Martian's' urges in a way that reminds them of how this possibly happened to them in childhood. Consequently, they are bound to get angry or upset - which would offend the 'Saturnian's' sense of propriety and order, causing them to suppress or belittle the 'Martian' even more. So the vicious circle of this interaction is all too obvious. One could see your interaction as a case of accelerator ('Martian') and brakes ('Saturnian') being applied at the same time. Unless you both learn to 'apply' yourselves at the appropriate times as you 'drive' along together, it will either never have got going at all, or it may not be long before your relationship breaks down altogether, and the question will arise as to whether it's a write-off or is simply in need of repair.

A's Uranus Opposition B's Mars'Hot' and 'Cool'*

This can be one of the most disharmonious interactions there is. It is as if you are both on a hair-trigger when it comes to one of you reacting to being told what to do by the other - or even if asked extremely nicely. In fact, there only has to be the merest suggestion of such a presumption. The energies coming from each of you are similar for they both have to do with independence. But the 'hot' person's idea of this is much more bound up with their ego, so when it feels threatened by the other 'cool' person's air of independence - which is actually a radical viewpoint suspended in emotional detachment - then they get real mad! To this, 'cool' can respond with an even more abstract opinion or emotional aloofness, and so the firework display begins. At its most extreme, such a confrontation can become physically aggressive. This interaction is a mutual cage-rattler and it has no part in a peaceful, live-in relationship. That is, not unless one of you feels decidedly inferior to the other and knuckles down in the first place. But the very nature of this interaction is to bring about an increased awareness of each person's individual rights and values, so this arrangement wouldn't last very long. Such mutual provocation can amount to a feeling of sexual attraction, but this is really just a fuse to the bomb, so to speak. A sign of handling this interaction correctly would be when one or both of you are able to control their urge to react or rebel, born of the realisation that they do have their own mind, and are free to do and think as they please. Until then, you will continue to rile each other, simply because one or both of you is not yet sure of their own act.

Major Strengths

A's Sun Supporting B's Sun*

Egos in harmony

As a couple you are basically very compatible - but such a statement needs some further definition that focuses on the word 'basically'. This interaction gives a sound foundation upon which to build a relationship and anything that might issue from it, like children or a product/creation. Whatever else might happen along the way, as the relationship is built and progresses, there will always be this basic understanding to refer to and be reassured by. But this does not indicate or determine the more individualistic qualities of the overall interaction. This is done by other planetary pairings, which can amount to anything from a wonderful mansion to an abandoned shell!

A's Mercury Supporting B's Sun*

Mental co-operation

You should have no trouble communicating, especially with regard to the more objective or non-emotional issues of life. This is a good aspect for intellectual companionship, and so also favours any working partnership. Whether or not such good mental rapport touches upon the more nitty-gritty aspects of your relationship would rest with the quality of other more weighty interaction. But you can certainly assist one another in the development of your minds and careers, giving confidence to one another in these areas as you do so.

A's Moon Supporting B's Mercury*

The 'working' relationship

You have no trouble in communicating how you feel or the point either of you wish to make to the other. The difficult interactions that you have with one another are to a large degree sorted out because you are able to be rational about matters but without becoming divorced from the emotional issues involved. As a rule, the more rational of the two of you is the one who contributes a clear mental viewpoint, while the other, more instinctual person provides a sense of emotional awareness and security, which aids the rational thinking of their partner. Similarly, the rational one helps clarify the instinctual one's feelings, while in return, they help out when the 'thinker' gets stuck in their head. This interaction also favours the workaday environment and makes for a common touch with regard to sensing what appeals to others in general, and what they feel comfortable with. Obviously, this can greatly benefit the job and emotional security of you as a couple, and for the same reasons you could work together well. Running through all this there can be an ongoing banter and sense of childlike fun.

A's Venus Supporting B's Mercury*

Friends and lovers

Both of you have a liking for the same people and pursuits, and have similar tastes. This goes a long way to ensuring a lasting interest and harmony between the two of you, and you are well able to have fun and be creative together. This interaction especially favours any joint artistic endeavours, either as a pair or with one of you being in an advisory role. You are in tune with one another. Most significantly though, the emotional and intellectual accord of this interaction enables you to see your way through to harmony and agreement even after the most severe conflicts. This is owing to your mutually creating an ongoing sense of what is good and decent about being human, and so co-operation leads to greater harmony, which in turn leads to more co-operation, and so on. You both profit from the simple activity of discussing your likes and dislikes, rather than expecting to either know them already, or assuming that they should be identical.

Venus and Mars are alright

This is an accurate but low-powered dart from Cupid. You are sexually or socially attracted to one another, but unless there are other more urgent interactions, you are not going to plunge in on the strength of this one alone. A curious thing that comes into focus when studying relationships with astrology is that it is the 'noisy', jagged or sharp-edged feelings that propel us into relationship rather than the gentle, well-modulated kind like this one. The latter are what are (sometimes sorely) needed once a relationship is off the ground. So whatever the case, there is a pleasant spiciness to being in each other's company. This interaction also contributes to any involvement you might have in the creative or performing arts. One to one, the gentler of you can show the other how to be more gracious and stylish in how they conduct themselves socially or go about getting what they want. On the other hand, the more assertive of the two of you can bring the other out of their shell and get them to realise their worth or charm.

Friendly lovers

Love and freedom coexist relatively easily, so this interaction is non-possessive - or at least, it diffuses any other indications of jealousy. There is a friendliness between you if you are lovers, and you are loving if you are just friends. One of you really appreciates and is turned on by the other's unusualness, causing them to depart from their usual social or sensual style. This can actually cause fluctuations in this person's affections however, as they swing back and forth between their old and new values. To the 'unusual' person, their partner is the perfect playmate, as they seem able to pick up on their odd or intuitive ideas - particularly in the sexual department - as well as being excitingly unpredictable. Not surprisingly, such an interaction is a little too open or loose to ensure fidelity and durability, but it is extraordinarily pleasurable. If you are involved artistically in any way, this gives a zing of originality to whatever you create.

A's Mars Supporting B's NeptuneSexual healing*

Because you instinctively and psychically pick up on each others feelings and desires, it can mean anything from your becoming exquisitely intertwined emotionally and sexually - or that you avoid having much to do with each other at all. This is not as perplexing as it might seem. You really do sense what is best for each other, even despite your lesser thoughts and feelings. This is not to say that this fine sensibility cannot be over-ridden, but it will always be there, trying to make itself felt. Such a subtle interaction is actually of the healing variety for it is this unerring ability to tune into areas of trouble and then lance or cleanse them that is the essence of it. If one or both of you are so inclined, this healing ray may be used very effectively upon others as well. In fact, there are many areas of endeavour, from dancing to business to film-making, that can draw from this sensitive interplay you have between body and psyche, muscle and the mystical.

Because this interaction embodies qualities of the higher mind - like faith, intuition, and collective codes of thought - you can at first seem to have a lot in common. But unless you also do so on a more personal level, it will become plain as time goes by that your ideas on how to live are distinctly at odds. For example, a theme of your relationship could be the seeking or practising of some unusual religious philosophy that progressively becomes a wedge between you as one of you becomes more and more convinced and the other more and more disenchanted. Apart from this kind of thing, there is a restlessness about you, or created by the chemistry between you, that can make things feel as if they are happening and on the move. But at a certain point, probably quite suddenly, you realise that you are on the same roundabout but turning off at different exits. If other more earthy and responsible ties exist between you, then this interaction could provide stimulating differences of opinion that you combine into some meaningful whole. But even then, beware, for this is a pie-in-the-sky aspect.

A's Jupiter Challenging B's PlutoJudge not lest we be judged*

Any excesses or incautious behaviour may lead to some kind of crisis. Should this happen you will be confronted with some sort of moral dilemma. One person will attempt to steamroller the other person's thoughts or feelings on the matter, and then that person will resist this with ethical or religious justifications. But the fact is that both of you have been, or are in danger of being, remiss in some matter of judgment or conduct. So this interaction is all about bringing to the surface some quite profound or taboo-ridden issue, possibly one that involves the law, be it made by man or God - or sex. Apart from being wise before the event, whatever that might be, the two of you best avoid bad feelings as much as possible by accepting that you are only human. But then the trouble with this interaction is that difficulties can arise simply because you forgot that human is all you really are. Accepting this, and that neither of you will really have the last word, is probably the only way of resolving the conflict. "Vengeance is Mine, saith the Lord" or "Judge not lest ye be judged".
